REFERENCE: James Redman

James Redman worked with my company on three productions all with varying demands. We rehearse within an intense rehearsal period some cast members join us for only one rehearsal prior to opening so demands are high. James worked in a patient and regimented fashion gaining the respect of cast and crew. James's knowledge is vast and when the technical team ran into extreme difficulties James was the conscientious director who worked with them until 4am ensuring that the opening night went ahead as planned. He was also able to provide extra crew due to his connections at very short notice. James's artistic value to a production is quite simply second to none. Every direction is profound and his ideas are intelligent and unique, providing an outstanding production which leave the audience filled with delight. Every production James has directed has given High Flying audiences a reason to get to their feet often before the finale. Standing ovations just became the normal.

If you are considering James Redman for a Director's job stop considering and grab him quickly – you will not be disappointed.

Kind regards
